Lynda Simmons is a Registered Architect and Fellow of the Institute with over 35 years of architectural practice experience, combined with more than 25 years in architectural education: researching and teaching in design studio, drawing, history seminars, professional practice and Masters thesis supervision. Lynda is a Professional Teaching Fellow at Waipapa Taumata Rau the University of Auckland, where she completed her research MArch in the field of New Zealand architectural history, 1960s-70s, and she has been an external moderator for degree courses at various universities. Lynda has worked in New York, Vancouver, London and Auckland, where she runs her own practice. She has maintained a connection and service to the profession and has acted as juror for, and been recipient of, NZIA and AAA architectural awards, and others. In 2019-21 Lynda wrote an opinion column for the Architecture New Zealand Journal, and in 2011 she co-founded the Architecture+Women•NZ professional and research group, leading it for a decade - and has an ongoing passion for research and community support in the area of equity and architecture.
